Apple's recently-launched AirPods Pro 2 offers a lot more features than its predecessors. One of the significant upgrades exclusive to the new buds is its charging case. It now has a speaker that plays an audible chime for specific alerts.

Just in case you find the audible sound notification of the AirPods Pro 2 charging case unnecessary and distracting, you can always turn it off. Here's how to do it.

What do the AirPods Pro 2 charging case sounds indicate?

Apple has added a layer of new functionalities to the AirPods Pro 2 with the more powerful H2 chip. It has enhanced sound quality and heightened 3D listening experience with Personalized Spatial Audio.

You can also locate your AirPod Pro 2 with ease. Unlike in other models, you can see the location of each of your buds and the charging case separately on the Find My app.

But what sets the AirPods Pro 2 apart from its predecessor are the upgrades Apple added to the case. The new U1 technology lets you track your charging case with Precision Finding through Find My.

Not only that, but the re-engineered AirPods Pro 2 case now has an in-case speaker at the bottom of the case, which lets you locate it faster by playing loud tones. The speaker also emits tones whenever:

- Charging has started.
- You pair it to a device.
- Your AirPods Pro 2 is low on battery.

How to disable AirPods Pro 2 charging case sounds

1. Ensure your AirPods Pro 2 is paired and connected to your iPhone or iPad.
2. Head to Settings.
3. Tap [your names]'s AirPods Pro 2 just under your name.
4. Scroll down until you find Enable Charging Case Sounds, which is enabled by default. Toggle it off.
